Information Regarding Patients with Prosthetic Joints, Potential Heart Murmurs or Related Complications.

If you, or your child, have prosthetic joints, or have been diagnosed as having a heart murmur of heart valve problems, your physician may recommend that certain precautions be taken prior to dental treatment. Damage from bacteria can be harmful or fatal to someone with a prosthetic joint or heart related problem. Pre-treatment antibiotics help minimize the risk of this problem during dental treatment.

If there is any question as to whether you may require pre-treatment antibiotics, do not guess. Advise your dentist and see your physician before you have dental treatment of any kind. Your dentist will rely on the information you provide. Provide your dentist with the name and telephone number of your family physician.
